COUNCILMAN KOHL EXPLAINS HIS PART IN RECENT CASE

Morrisville Still Agitated Over the Recent Case of Policeman

GIVES ALL THE FACTS

Case Is Reviewed From The Beginning by Innocent
Participant

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 29.—Councilman Elwood Kohl, of the First Ward, scored "injustice in the Morrisville courts" today when he issued a statement in answer to the charges of Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan, of this place.

The dispute all started when Officer Joseph Lebegern, of the local police force, was accused and tried before Mayor Thomas B. Stockham for drinking while on duty and striking a prisoner without provocation. Nolan, in a newspaper statement Sunday, said that he believes the officer is in the right, and resented attacks upon the Justice's office.

"No one is going to make a fool out of me," declared Nolan in his statement. He asked for harmony, but expressed his willingness to fight, if necessary.

Kohl scored this attitude by saying that "harmony" and a "willingness to fight" are not synonymous. He, as an eye-witness, also gives a complete account of what he saw on the night when Anthony Mattis, the prisoner whom it is alleged that the officer struck, was arrested by Officer Lebegern.

Councilman Kohl's statement is as follows:

Due to the triviality of the case of Officer Lebegern versus Anthony Mattis, I have been constrained to discuss it in the press. Unfortunately, I was an eye-witness of the affair and became involved as a witness in the case. Then, it seems that certain political enemies saw a long-sought opportunity to injure my reputation and made a disorderly conduct molehill grow into a political mountain, and the true facts were distorted for selfish personal political gain and then shouted on the street corners and in the newspapers. A disorderly conduct case became a major political crisis. Such a conclusion is the result of poor rationalization, or else it is the result of malevolence and calculated distortion of the truth.

I am, therefore, no longer constrained to reply to the recent statements in the newspaper, since I feel that an answer is necessary to protect my character and reputation and good faith in the cause of justice, and that the people may know the true account of the happenings.

It is felt by many that the recent newspaper statement is an attempt to cover up apparent irregularities by setting forth the concomitant implications of political disaster attached to this momentous disorderly conduct case. At one place in the statement we read about harmony and in the next paragraph we read about incipient trouble. Harmony and threatening to fight are not synonymous; it is savors of ulterior motives.

The following is a true account of what happened in the Lebegern-Mattis case. I was standing in front of the town hall when Officer Lebegern and Anthony Mattis walked up Washington street. The officer did not have hold of Mattis. He walked erectly, like the officer, and I did not know anything was wrong. So, I jokingly remarked, "Open the doors, here comes another one." To my surprise, Officer Lebegern said, "That is right." Justice Nolan was on the steps of his court but did not open the door when Lebegern asked him to. After some time, during which the officer told the spectators about the trouble, much to the embarrassment of the prisoner, and after a period of silence, Mattis said, "Well, what are you going to do?" Still the hearing did not proceed, and the door was not opened. Then, after another wait, Mattis went up the steps and he said, again, "What are you going to do? If you want two dollars I guess I can give it to you." To my amazement, Justice Nolan promptly pronounced Mattis drunk on the grounds that a sober man would not make such a statement and denied him a hearing and ordered the officer to lock him up for the night.

In the meantime, Kleinfelder, a friend of Mattis, arrived and put his arms around Mattis and told him to come home. Mattis pushed him away and told him to go home or he would also get into trouble. Thereupon Officer Lebegern parted them, and while Mattis faced away from the officer, the officer struck Mattis on the side of the face, near the eye, with his fist, with such force that the boy was dazed and carried the mark of the blow as evidence for a complaint to the Mayor against the officer the next morning.

About ten minutes later in front of Dickel's Hardware Store, in private, I asked the officer about the charge against Mattis. He said the charge was disorderly conduct and explained Mattis' conduct. I told him that he was right; he is guilty of disorderly

MONSTER OF REVOLT STILL LURKS OVER PRISONS

Calm Before the Storm Pervades Both Cherry Hill and Graterford

AUTHORITIES WATCH

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—Between the massive gray stone walls of Pennsylvania's Eastern Penitentiary at Cherry Hill, lurked the monster of revolt today. An ominous hush fell over the century-old prison in the wake of a fresh uprising that was accompanied by the terrific peril of fire.

Tear gas bombs quelled the new insurrection, but a spirit of unrest seethed within Cherry Hill fortress and within the new "model" branch of the prison at Graterford, was not subdued.

Over both of the "big houses," this morning hung a great calm—the calm before the storm.

At Graterford, 25 miles northwest of here, 1100 embittered convicts clung stubbornly to their hunger strike. At Cherry Hill in the center of Philadelphia, all of the 1273 inmates remained locked in their cells after another violent flare-up of mutiny.

For a brief time, shortly before midnight the ancient prison was threatened with the added terror of flame. Seventeen desperados who had been flung into the "cold storage" solitary confinement, cells of the "Klondike," chose fire as their newest weapon in their struggle against the prison management.

After "raising hell" with their voices, the solitary prisoners set fire to newspapers and tossed the burning sheets into the corridor.

Advancing grimly into the "Klondike" the guards proceeded to lay down a heavy barrage of agonizing tear gas. The attack quickly stilled the tumult.

The flames from the burning papers were stamped out.

ARRESTED IN HOLD-UP CASE

Cleveland, O., Aug. 29.—Addison Mease, 24-year-old Cleveland hoodlum, arrested as a suspect in the sensational $50,000 mail truck robbery at Butler last Friday today was alleged to have confessed to participation in a $3,000 bank robbery at Three Springs, Pa.

200,000-YEAR-OLD TOOTH

CANTON—(INS)—The tooth of an animal believed to have lived 200,000 years ago has been discovered in Kwangsi Province. Bones of pre-historic animals, stone axes and utensils used thousands of years ago have also been found. The discovery has been announced by the Kwangtung and Kwangsi Geological Research Institute.

A REAL IMPROVEMENT

(By "The Stroller")

With the completion of the improvements on Otter, Mill and Radcliffe streets, the annoyance which for the past several weeks has disturbed the housekeepers along these thoroughfares is abated.

We are sure that the improvements have been worth the annoyance and that while clouds of dust rolled over the streets, during the time that the work was in progress, it is now all a thing of the past.

Along North Radcliffe street, much work is yet to be done, but when the additional width is hard surfaced, this section of the street will indeed be a fine highway.

What an improvement over the time when the flat-wheeled trolley cars used to bump, bumpety, bump, over disjointed rails and send a reverberating crash through the air.

AIRPLANE BEACONS AT CROYDON AND FALLSINGTON ARE TWO OF MANY WHICH DOT NEARLY 700 MILES OF FEDERAL AIRWAYS IN STATE; SAFELY GUIDE PILOTS

Those Unfamiliar With Aviation Marvel at Fact Such Guide Courses

FIVE ROUTES INCLUDED

Bureau of Air Commerce Also Maintains Radio Communication Stations

Nightly as the rays of the airplane beacons at Croydon and Fallsington flash through the sky those unfamiliar with aviation marvel at the fact that these lights guide aviators over their course.

These two lights are only two which dot nearly 700 miles of Federal airways in Pennsylvania and flash to guide airmen safely on their journeys.

These lights, established by the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce as a part of the Federal system which extends into nearly every section of the country, consist of 63 airways rotating beacons at 10 to 15-mile intervals to outline the routes; 4 blinker lights to supplement the larger beacons; and boundary lights at the 12 Department of Commerce intermediate landing fields which, in conjunction with other airports, are spaced 40 to 50 miles apart.

The Federal lighted airways in this state include sections of the Atlanta-New York, Chicago-New York, Columbus-Philadelphia, Washington-Cleveland and Cleveland-Albany routes.

As a part of the Federal Airways System in Pennsylvania, the Bureau of Air Commerce maintains radio communication stations at Bellefonte, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh for the broadcast of weather information to aircraft in flight and to airports not located on the airways. There also are radio range beacons at Bellefonte, Erie, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh which provide directive signals to mark the courses for airmen flying while visibility is poor. At Brookville, Bucktown, McConnellsburg, Numidia, Winklesburg and Martins Creek there are radio marker beacons, low powered transmitters to assist airmen in identifying these fields and to provide two-way radio communication, and an additional one is under construction at Mercer. There are 17 teletypewriter stations in the state, at: Erie, Mercer, Brookville, Greenwood Club, Kylertown, Bellefonte, Winklesburg, Sunbury, Numidia, Park Place, Martins Creek, Coatesville, Harrisburg, McConnellsburg, Bucks-town, Greensburg and Pittsburgh, which are connected by leased wires for the collection and transmission of aeronautical weather reports to the airports and radio stations for broadcast. Department of Commerce intermediate landing fields for the emergency use of all pilots flying in Pennsylvania are available at Barnesville, Beaver Falls, Bellefonte, Brookville, Bucktown, Everett, Greenwood Club, Kylertown, Martins Creek, McConnellsburg, Mercer and Numidia. These fields are conditioned for the operation of aircraft, marked for day identification and boundary lighted for night use. Caretakers are employed to see that the fields are always in proper condition.

The Bureau of Air Commerce also supervises the operation from a safety point of view of the scheduled airlines operating through Pennsylvania.

Airplanes in Pennsylvania bearing Department of Commerce license total 414. These are examined periodically by the Bureau's inspectors

FIND MAN DEAD IN SHACK DUE TO LACK OF FOOD

Israel Jewel, Colored, Morrisville, Found Upon the Floor of His Home

WIFE DEAD TWO YEARS

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 29.—Israel Jewel, 80-year-old Negro, was found dead in his little wooden shack on Woodland avenue, here, Monday, from what is believed to be a case of starvation.

This unusual happening came to the attention of police when 12-year-old Martin Comiskey, of nearby the Jewel shack, took food to the old Negro on Monday and found him lying dead in the middle of the one room in the shack. The Comiskey boy was in the habit of taking food to the old man every few days, and had done so the Thursday before the man was found.

The old Negro had evidently made a struggle to get out of the house before he succumbed because furniture had been upset and an old curtain had been pulled down and was lying over the dead man's body. The corpse was clad only in an old shirt when found.

His body was so thin and bony that it is believed he slowly starved to death. He had no income, and had lived alone in the shack since the death of his wife two years ago.

The death of Jewel recalls the unusual case confronting the police upon the death of his wife, Annie, when she was found dead in bed two years ago. Although the husband lived with his wife, he did not become alarmed at her condition until she did not move out of bed for two days. Police were notified at that time and death was proclaimed to be due to alcoholism.

The body of the dead man was viewed by Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young, and was removed to the morgue of J. Allen Hooper, of this place. The burial is expected to take place in a Newtown cemetery.

START CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

Harrisburg, Aug. 29.—Criminal proceedings have been started by the Milk Control Board against the Eisenberg Farm Products Corporation, operating milk stations at Elizabethtown, St. Peters, and Oxford, according to announcement by the board today.

The suit charged the company with violating the milk control law, in not filing a $36,000 protection bond, operating without a license, and failing to file monthly reports of the utilization of milk purchase.

Purchase of milk by the company ranged from $15,000 to $48,000 monthly, the board said, from producers in Bucks, Montgomery, Chester, Berks, Northumberland, Juniata, Perry, Cumberland and Dauphin counties.

ENDS LIFE FACING JAIL TERM

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—Facing a two year imprisonment in the county jail for having mis-applied funds of the bank which he once headed, Leon A. Lewis, 47, ended his life here today, by swallowing poison.

The financier, formerly president of the Bank of Philadelphia and Trust Company, was rushed to the Jewish Hospital from his home where he drank the poison. He was pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital.

Only yesterday Lewis' attorney filed an appeal in the state supreme court from his conviction and sentence for mis-application of $9,000 of the bank's funds.

The supreme court affirmed the conviction and sentence last July 13th. Two other officials of the bank were also found guilty of mis-application.

SURROUND FLEEING CONVICTS

Bedford, Aug. 29.—Following the wounding and capture of one of the four prisoners who escaped from Rockview Penitentiary yesterday, authorities early today were reported to have surrounded the other three in a wooded section near Johnstown.

Charles B. Litzinger, 27, of Westmoreland County, was the one prisoner taken into custody today. He was captured by highway patrolmen after being shot in the legs. A cordon of highway patrolmen and members of the sheriff's department, were reported as having surrounded the trio who escaped after highway patrolman M. J. Wicker had captured Litzinger.

The four prisoners escaped from Rockview yesterday afternoon in a prison official's automobile. They took the car from the prison garage, cut through barbed wire of the prison enclosure, and drove off.

NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

Lansdale, Aug. 29.—A narrow escape from death was experienced today by Harvey King, 35, of Belfrey, and his son, Homer, 11, when their automobile was struck by a freight train at the Broad street grade crossing of the Reading Railroad here.

The father and son suffered lacerations and bruises. Their automobile was demolished.

ASSIGN DELEGATE QUOTA TO COUNTY

Bucks Co. Given Minimum of 20 Representatives at State Convention

OPENS OCTOBER 10TH

Bucks county has been assigned a minimum quota of twenty delegates to the coming annual convention of Pennsylvania Sunday School leaders.

This great convention is held each year, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, will be held at Indiana, Pa., October 10, 11 and 12.

Under the leadership of the Indiana County Sabbath School Association, plans have been practically completed for the event.

Indiana has never been host to a state-wide Sabbath school convention. Rev. S. E. Moyer, president of the Bucks County Sabbath School Association, and his associates are laying active plans to see that the county's quota of delegates is fully met.

"The fact is, if each Sabbath school in the county would send one live-wire interested delegate to this great inspirational gathering it would be a blessing to that school," Rev. Moyer said today.

"Reduced rail fares will be granted and our highways are so fine and the country so beautiful in October that our county organization is hopeful that many more than our quota will be tempted to go."

MURDER MYSTERY STILL BAFFLES COUNTY POLICE

Three Days of Questioning
Fail to Produce Any Definite Results

VICTIM BURIED TODAY

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 29.—State police and Bucks County Detective Russo are of the opinion, after three days of investigating, that "Mame" George Koury is responsible for the murder of James Donegan, 33, of Philadelphia, who was fatally shot in Koury's roadside restaurant early Monday morning, near Riegelsville.

Donegan will be buried today from the home of his parents in Easton and the funeral will be attended by his sweetheart, Miss Marie Carmichael, Philadelphia, who has aided the police in their probe of the tragedy.

Miss Carmichael has told the authorities that she will return at any time that she is wanted.

No actual arrests have as yet been made and the charge of murder has not as yet been pinned on anyone. The investigation by the police has narrowed the suspects down to two or three persons.

Yesterday the police questioned Habo Koury, 17, son of the restaurant proprietor. Nothing definite was learned from him.

Joseph McCarron, Philadelphia, is reported to have told the police that he "saw" the shooting. McCarron is said to have been sitting on a truck outside of the place at the time of the trouble. He is alleged to have stated that a man with a white apron had a gun in his hand. Habo Koury was the only person in the restaurant wearing a white apron, according to reports.

Police went to Easton Hospital yesterday to question Koury who is reported to be in a critical condition. The questioning was not permitted by the hospital authorities because of Koury's condition. It was stated at 10:30 this morning in Easton that Koury's condition was somewhat improved. He was given a severe beating in the fight staged at the time of the shooting.

John Murphy, Philadelphia, who admitted tossing away the pistol later found in the rear of Highway Patrol barracks, here, says that he picked the gun up outside of the restaurant after the shooting with the intention of giving it to the officers. After arriving at the Highway Patrol barracks here he lost his nerve and threw the gun into the field.

Detective Russo telephoned Harrisburg today to learn if the pistol was registered. No record was available. Police went to Bucksville today to question some others reported to be familiar with the case.

Joseph Raub, prominent business man of Riegelsville, and owner of the place where the fight was staged and the shooting took place, has been questioned by the police, as he was reported near the scene at the time of the trouble.

BENSALEM SCHOOLS TO OPEN FOR TERM, THURSDAY, SEPT. 6

Examinations To Be Offered
On Sept. 5th, Beginning at 9 o'Clock

BUILDINGS IN CONDITION

Enumeration Indicates Slightly
Increased Enrollment
This Year

The Fall term of the Bensalem Township public schools will open on September 6. On the morning of September 5, beginning at nine o'clock, d. s. t., examinations will be offered to those students of the high school who desire to erase 'conditions.' These re-examinations will be offered only to those individuals who have made an honest effort during the Summer, either through the use of summer school, or private tutors, etc., to prepare for these examinations. Those grade students who have been promised an opportunity to be re-examined are requested to appear on the morning of the fifth for their tests.

All the school buildings of the township are now in splendid condition for the opening of the schools. Through the aid of C. W. A. workers many changes and improvements have been made to all of the schools.

The results of the enumeration of school children of the township between the ages of 6 and 16 indicates a slightly increased enrollment over last year. The enumerator's list also includes a number of new names—names of persons who have moved into the district since last June. A number of these new students have called at the central office of the township, which is in the Bensalem Township High School building at Cornwells Heights, and have registered. A great many other students have not done so. The superintendent requests all such persons to appear before the opening of school for the purpose of enrolling.

"We require a proper transfer from the previous school, the last report card or a certificate of credits, a vaccination certificate, and a birth certificate," states Superintendent Samuel K. Faust.

All beginners are required to present an evidence of age, either birth or baptismal certificate, at the time they appear for registration.

All pupils of the township will be permitted to return to their homes at the end of the morning session on September 6. September 7 will be the first two-session day. The cafeteria will be open for service on September 7.

The first faculty meeting for the 1934-35 term will convene at 2 p. m., Wednesday afternoon, September 5. The faculty of the Andalusia, Edgington, Penn Valley, Trevoise, and Cornwells elementary schools will remain the same as last year. There will be a few changes in the high school faculty; these faculty changes will be announced later.

The school board has found it necessary, due to economic conditions, to discontinue the use of one school bus. This curtailment in the transportation program will necessarily oblige a large number of pupils, who heretofore were transported, to walk to and from school. The transportation committee very carefully studied the whole problem of transportation and has rearranged it in such a manner as to be able to transport the smaller children in preference to the larger and more experienced students.

"We hope that all students will report on the very first day of the term. Late enrollments are a serious handicap to both the student and the school," states Superintendent Faust.

St. Mark's Church Is Beneficiary at Card Party

Miss Bessie Rafferty headed the committee in charge of the card party given last evening in St. Mark's School Hall, by the Junior Catholic Daughters of America, Bristol Court. The affair benefited St. Mark's Church.

Beautiful prizes had been assembled for the selection of the lucky contestants and "500" and pinocle were the games played. Refreshments of cake and soft drinks were served.

Highest scorers in "500" were Mrs. E. H. Middleton, 4310; Mrs. Joseph Foster, 3540; Mrs. Catherine Lynn, 3490; Mrs. Warren Armstrong, 3270. Pinocle players with highest scores were: W. Armstrong, 791; Miss Julia McFadden, 765; R. McGee, 747; John Dugan, 745; M. Oliver, 738.

MUSIC IN THE AIR

In New York and nearby hereafter, when there's music in the air it will be pure music (in the current movie-reform sense of purity) and no thought or suggestion that would cause your grandmother to blush (obs.) will linger in its words. For, to ward off any danger of the extension of the church crusade against indecent movies into the field of radio, a committee of well-known orchestra leaders and radio broadcasters has been formed in Manhattan to ban suggestive songs and titles from the air.

The committee will consist of five men: Richard Himber, who seems to be its spokesman, Rudy Vallee, Guy Lombardo, Paul Whiteman and Abe Lyman, whose names speak for themselves. They will be known as "The Committee of Five for the Betterment of Radio."

The committee is to meet each Friday in the apartment of Mr. Himber, and pass judgment on all the songs published during the week. When a song is found objectionable, in title or lyrics, the publisher will be asked to revise it. If that request is denied, the song will be placed on a list of "banned songs." The list will be mailed once a week to orchestra leaders throughout the country, most of whom have already agreed not to play any banned song.

The move is an astute one and doubtless will save the purveyors of radio music a lot of grief, for one suspects reformers of ever seeking new worlds to conquer and new pleasures to curtail. One wishes it might operate with equal effect against the other ills of radio.

THE END OF THE WORLD

If Mr. Voliva's flat world is going to end on September 10 there are a few things that will have to be attended to right away. Previous prophecies from Mr. Voliva put the Day of Destruction in 1946, and most persons were more-or-less putting off preparing for it from day to day; after all, 1946 is a long ways off, and there was plenty of time to attend to everything.

But September 10 is only a matter of days and it looks as though many will have to step lively. For one thing, there's the matter of vacation—that will have to be crowded in somehow before September 10. A man can't miss his last vacation. Then there are two books, a lawnmower and an umbrella to go back to friends and neighbors if the plan is to look the end of the world in the face with any kind of conscience. One of the books has been around since 1926 and it will leave quite a gap in the household, but this is a time for drastic action.

There is, of course, the silver lining; creditors will have to struggle along as best they can.

Listening to Mr. Voliva's predictions is like taking a chance on one of the great sweepstakes; there is the exciting and even pleasurable sensation of looking forward to a routine-shattered event, with only the faintest apprehension it will ever take place.

"CAROLINE" by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XIX

The next morning Caroline hastily swallowed a cup of coffee before Mrs. Wade arrived and was out of the house long before her parents were up. When she returned they were at breakfast. She greeted them breezily. Mrs. Rutledge stared disapprovingly at her costume.

"Congratulations," she invited. "I've obtained a position!"

Her mother lifted inquiring eyebrows. Her father looked pleased.

"Old clothes, an assumed name and evidence of a willing spirit did it," Caroline explained.

"An assumed name?" her mother echoed. "Is it something you're ashamed of?"

"Not at all. I had to fool Henry Dunsforth—in case he ever hears the names of his employees."

"Henry Dunsforth!" her father ejaculated. "You don't mean..."

"No headline for me," Caroline broke in. "There's a new order of things. I belong to it. It's my day. I'm going to start at the bottom as William Rutledge did and make myself valuable to society. If technology or anything like it comes along and tells me when and how to work—okay—but I'm not going to starve in the meantime."

Full comprehension came to her mother. "A factory worker!" she wailed. Mr. Rutledge was torn between indignation and a new respect for his daughter.

"A factory worker," Caroline repeated with pride. "The only thing I needed to make me a person of equal rights in this world. I am now the sociological ideal—an educated, healthy worker. I hope I shall learn to work as successfully as I learned to play. I got the job half an hour ago and I'm beginning already to feel the satisfaction of earned leisure. Think of what an evening of idleness will be like after a day of labor!"

"But where will it get you—this sort of thing?" her father pressed. "You won't make enough money to fill your leisure with the kind of play you learned to enjoy."

"I think," Caroline said stoutly, "no matter what's coming, there will always be a premium on brains. I'm going to develop mine. They're good brains—you know that. You and the men and women who passed you your genes have given me a good start. I'm going back to the U to study at night. I'm going to learn about chemistry, and some day I'll know how to run the factory."

This was too much for Mrs. Rutledge. The next quarter hour was taken up with bringing her out of a heart attack. Her daughter in a factory! She couldn't bear it! But she did, for Caroline would not give it up.

The factory work, because she saw each day given to it as a step upward to greater achievement, was thrilling to her. It irked her only in that it was confining. Her father one night, in an ill-humor, questioned her ultimate success. She argued that she was successful, that she wanted greater achievement only in order to pay the world back what it had given her.

"Where do you get such ideas?" her mother asked fretfully.

"From the young man next door," Mr. Rutledge supplied sneeringly. "I imagine he expounds them in order to give an illusion of importance to his very humble position in society."

Caroline's eyes darkened. "When you talk like that, father," she said musingly, "I'm inclined to think you're afraid of those at the bottom of the heap."

"What nonsense are you talking now?"

"It isn't nonsense," Caroline differed. "It's the handwriting on the wall. If you can't see it, that will be your misfortune. You can't just stand still and keep up with the world."

"Are you being impertinent?" Mr. Rutledge said severely.

"I don't mean to be, but you are rude when you speak as you did about one of my friends. I think I owe more to Malcolm than to anyone else in the world. Without him it's very probable I couldn't have got work even in a factory. He has some influence—in the very factory that you lost. Doesn't that mean anything to you?"

"What could it possibly mean?"

"It means that the necessity for work has forced him to fulfill his obligation to society. He's in the swim—he can keep on going—anywhere, perhaps. While you . . . you seem to have no sense of sociological responsibility whatsoever!"

"Caroline!" her mother interposed. "I don't know what you mean but it sounds like something you should not be saying to your father."

"Some one has to say it to him," Caroline declared. "It's only fair that I should do it—he did as much for me." She turned to her father. "You told me I had to get a job, didn't you?" she challenged. "Well,

"Malcolm's going to the U too," Caroline explained. "Fortunately, for me, else I don't know how I'd get there."

"Just for the ride, I suppose," her father remarked sarcastically. "Not altogether. I told you he's ambitious. The special night classes they've started will give him his chance."

"His chance? I thought you considered him well established, or is your ambition for him greater than his own?"

"I merely told him what opportunities there are at the university," Caroline answered coldly. "He needed no urging to take advantage of them. As I remember it, he said he'd be a cap to pass up anything provided for his advancement. Which comes down to this, darling: nature has provided some beautiful rocks at the river. Will you get

"If you catch on above Malcolm then you can talk about his humble position; until you do, you're not up to his level!"

I'd tried, before that, but I thought I could be a bit particular. And that's what you're doing—waiting for something you want. You don't seem to realize that you've lost the position you inherited and that you'll have to start wherever you can get a foothold to climb up again. If you catch on above Malcolm, then you can talk about his humble position; until you do, you're not up to his level!"

Philip Rutledge gasped, his face reddened, and he appeared on the verge of losing his self-control, but under Caroline's coolly defiant gaze he slowly calmed down.

"I certainly shan't go to Henry Dunsforth for a position, if that is what you are thinking of," he snapped.

"No. And I'm aware that jobs are not to be had for the asking. But you could give up the notion that labor with your hands is a shameful thing and help me get a garden laid out in the backyard. You could put in walks and build a lily pool and a rock garden. Malcolm has loads of plants and bulbs we can put in this fall. And you have only to go down to the river for all the rocks you require. I won't need the car any more. Malcolm's putting an extra seat on his motorcycle to take me to work."

Mrs. Rutledge was stunned, but Philip answered explosively: "It's disgraceful! I forbid you to do such an unseemly thing!"

Caroline smiled. "Please don't resort to ridiculous gestures, father," she said quietly. "I haven't told you everything. Malcolm and I have another reason for needing a means of transportation of our own."

them and bring them here to advance the civic standard of our back-yard, or won't you?"

"I won't—as you well know. The analogy is too far-fetched."

Caroline sighed. "I thought you wouldn't," she said slowly. "I'm sorry, mother," she added to Alva. "It's you who have to look at the dreary spot." She glanced at a clock. "Oh—would you mind letting me use your wrist watch? Minutes count with me now. I'm obliged to watch the time." She got to her feet. "Malcolm and I are going to enroll. You won't need the car tonight, will you, father? It's the last time; we'll have the motorcycle tomorrow."

He hadn't liked using the street cars while Caroline had the automobile, but he'd not complained inasmuch as it wouldn't run unless she and Malcolm kept it in repair. And he guessed quite accurately that the young man wouldn't touch it if it were not for Caroline's use. He did not want to tell Caroline that he hadn't any money to spend on it—that he'd mortgaged the house and failed on the market again, on the advice of a man he'd trusted. This loss rankled deeply. Philip Rutledge suspected that it was the result of a fair-weather friend's boredom. He had gone to see the man at his office, caught him at a busy moment. He was sure now that the man had given him the bad tip merely to get rid of him because he wasn't interested in the matter which Philip had wanted to talk to him about.

Yesterday and Today

WHO would want to go back to the standards of even a generation ago? We have traveled far since then. Inventions and scientific discoveries have furnished the principal vehicles: New conveniences, improved merchandise, better foods, added health-conserving means.

But the thing which has hastened us on to the knowledge and acceptance of their benefits is advertising. It has brought new things quickly to all of us and sped us toward a different, better mode of living.

Modern advertising sells us, not only things, but ideas. The advertising of soaps has sold us the health advantages of more frequent bathing. The advertising of modern bathroom equipment has made bathing a singular pleasure.

The advertising of improved razors and beard softeners has made whisking off whiskers a simple daily ditty instead of a weekly major operation.

Tooth-paste, tooth-brush and mouth-wash manufacturers and retailers are saving us untold aches and years of marred smiles, by advertising the importance of oral hygiene.

As a result of the advertising of food manufacturers and purveyors, we have escaped from the drowsy dullness caused by heavy breakfasts and are full of forenoon vim and clear-headedness.

The clothes we wear, furniture we use, fuel we burn, car we drive, telephone we've installed—all these would not so quickly have come home to us, were it not for the silent but irresistible force of advertising.

Keep pace with the world you live in by reading the advertisements in this newspaper.

AFFLERBACH IN LEAD OF CO. LEAGUE HITTERS

Charles "Dutch" Afflerbach, fiery catcher of the Hulmeville team, is leading the hitters of the Lower Bucks County League playoff series. Dutch is clouting the ball at a .667 clip and is far out front of the sluggers. He has ratted two doubles and a like number of trials in six trips to the plate.

Watson, Bruce and Choma are next in line with three hits in eight times up. Watson and Bruce play with Hulmeville while Choma is the first-sacker for Mulholland's team. Paul Barrett and Hefman are the only other Bristol players to receive more than one hit.

The third game of the series will be played at Hulmeville on Saturday while the fourth game will be on Leedom's field, Sunday.

St. Ann's Bocce Team Loses To Bristol Bocce Club

Participating in the first official inter-club bocce match of the season, the St. Ann's team was defeated by the Bristol Bocce Club. The game was played on the St. Ann's alleys last night.

The contest was divided into five sets with a running of 16 points. Two men from each side comprised a set with the entire eight balls being used. The Wood-Streeters could garner only one set.

The score: 16-6, 16-7, 11-16, 16-8, and 16-9.

However, St. Ann's bowled better ball than the score indicated.

An exceptionally large crowd of spectators gathered to witness the contest and thrilled to many exciting and spectacular shots by both teams. Keen interest was stimulated throughout the entire game.

The Saints played a good game despite the fact that they have just recently organized a bocce team and are still in the learning. It must also be known and considered that the Bristol Bocce Club was the first bocce unit in the town; having organized several years ago. They boast of being one of the finest teams in the country.

St. Ann's are fervently interested in the game, due to its enjoyment and growing popularity. They are hopeful of constructing a successful winning combination in the near future. A second game is tentatively being arranged for September 16th between St. Ann's and the Bristol Democratic Club.

HIBERNIANS LOSE TO TRENTON BLACK SOCKS

The Hibernians rallied in the last inning of their fray with the Trenton Black Sox last night but fell one run short of deadlocking the score. The Trentonians captured the fray by the close count of 3-2. Leedom's field was the scene of the game.

The Bristolians played an errorless game in the field and came through with several brilliant plays but the early lead of the visitors was predominating despite the spurt put on by the Hibs in their big frame.

To begin the final canto, Ennis singled to right. Ennis stole second and scored on Sullivan's hit. Sullivan also stole and came home on Lamar's mis-play on Devlin's grounder.

The Trenton boys scored two in the third on Bynum's hit, a pass to Lamar, and another hit by Michler. In the following inning, Crossland's triple and Bynum's single counted another run.

these licenses by the Department's inspectors. These officials are constantly on duty throughout the state to see that the Air Traffic Rules and other provisions of the Air Commerce Regulations are properly enforced.

Pennsylvania is in the First Inspection District. This district includes Pennsylvania, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia, with headquarters at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, New York, and is in charge of Supervising Aeronautical Inspector S. L. Willis. Inspector C. D. Doak, based at Pittsburgh, visits Pennsylvania airports regularly.

Pennsylvania is also in the First Air Navigation Maintenance District, with headquarters at Newark, N. J. This district is composed of Pennsylvania, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware, New York, Maryland, District of Columbia, and parts of Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio, and is under the supervision of Manager T. B. Bourne. The district headquarters office has charge of the maintenance and operation of all airways facilities in these states.

The Bureau of Air Commerce has designated 24 physicians in the state to give physical examinations to applicants for pilots' licenses and also to give examinations for renewals of such licenses.

Through its publications the Bureau of Air Commerce carries detailed descriptions of all the airports and landing fields in the state. This information is given nationwide distribution and is for the guidance and assistance of all who fly.

As a result of the airport development program conducted by the Civil Works Administration with the technical assistance of the Bureau of Air Commerce, nine airport projects are under way in Pennsylvania. This includes the construction of new fields and improvements of existing ones.

In the matter of air navigation maps, the Bureau of Air Commerce has published four sectional airway maps showing the State of Pennsylvania in connection with the program for the publication of a series of such maps covering the entire United States.

conduct, but you should not have struck him with your fist. It was unnecessary because he did not disobey or resist you. Lebegern replied, "What's that of your business." I told him, that as a councilman, I was responsible to the people for his conduct. Lebegern answered, "It is none of your business; you are not on the Police Committee." I then told him it would be my duty to report the matter to the Mayor.

About ten o'clock the next day, Chief Cooper said Nolan ordered Lebegern's prisoner released and Mattis was directed to appear at two o'clock for a hearing. At this hearing, which was postponed, drunkenness was added to the charge of disorderly conduct. After the postponement, I remarked, "The boy must have got drunk over night in jail." This remark, it is said, greatly perturbed Justice Nolan. After the postponement, it is rumored that this case was tried all day on the curb and Morrisville "curbstone" justice was dispensed. This reported pre-judging of the case gave the impression that injustice threatened.

I felt injustice was going to be done to Mattis. He was disorderly and I told him so, but he was not drunk, in my opinion, and in the opinion of others. The charge of drunkenness may have been added to explain the striking of the prisoner by Officer Lebegern.

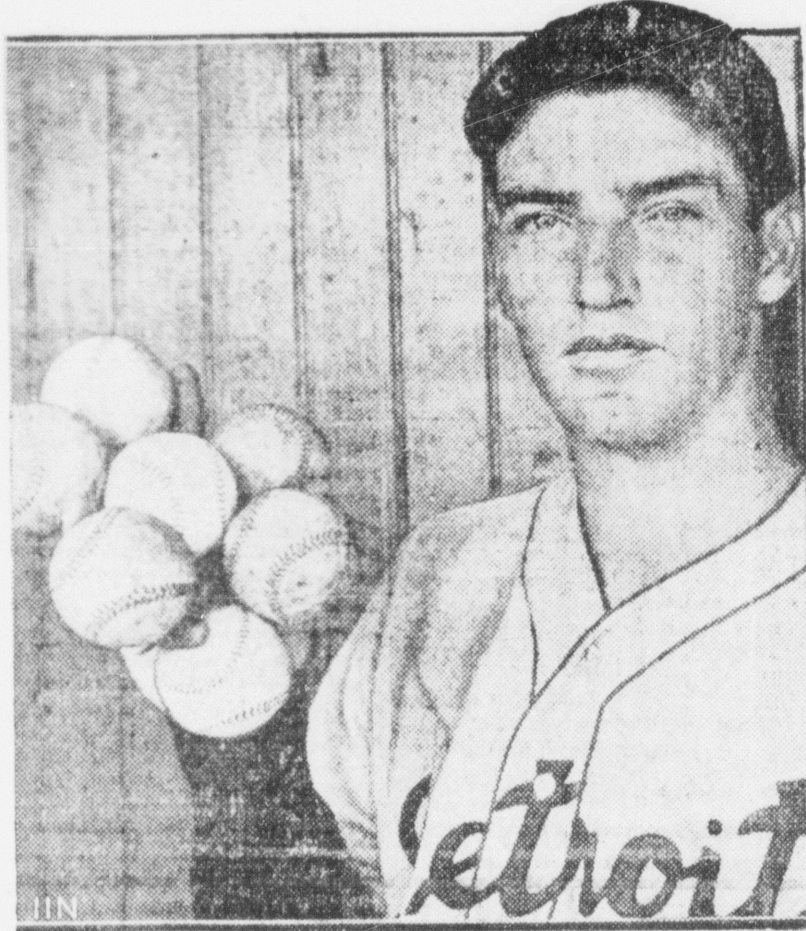

Mattis is poor. He was out of work. His family is poor. I hate injustice; so I arranged for counsel to represent him. Counsel advised Justice Nolan that Mattis would plead guilty to disorderly conduct, but that conviction on drunkenness would be appealed to the county court. Nolan, it is said, before the case was tried, told defense counsel that the case would be settled to the satisfaction of the Mayor and counsel. So, in the subsequent ceremony, that marks an epoch in the dispensing of justice in Morrisville, Mattis was found guilty, but sentence was suspended, and the justice forfeited the costs. Everybody was happy and "a good time was had by all."

But, Mattis lodged a complaint with the Mayor because the officer struck him unjustly and threatened to swear out a warrant for assault and battery against the officer. Mattis also told the Mayor that the officer drank with him while on duty and in uniform and signed an affidavit to this effect. The Mayor found it his duty to conduct the hearing on the charges. At this hearing, Officer Lebegern was reprimanded but suspension without pay was withheld. Everybody again shook hands at the end of the hearing and everybody seemed satisfied.

Then, it is said, a vicious influence began to agitate and publish distorted facts with a malevolent purpose, and a disorderly conduct case grew into a major political crisis, as before mentioned. With these facts, finally at hand, I trust that the people of our town will judge the facts and the agitation accompanying them according to the merit they deserve. I have done no wrong in this case. I acted in good faith, in the cause of justice, and in the defense of a poor boy, and I regret that I have been maligned for so-called "political" reasons. I rest my case in the good judgment of the good people of our town whom I am trying so hard to serve well in every respect.

"Schoolboy" Has Man's Size Hand

After tying the record of 16 consecutive victories, Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe, Detroit's pitching ace, is gunning for a new American league record of 17 consecutive victories. Here the big Tiger hurler is shown in the clubhouse, holding seven regulation American league baseballs in his huge right hand.

CHEVROLET MASTER SIX SEDAN

MANY people find it a good plan, when buying a car, to consider first what it does to make motoring more enjoyable; next, what it costs to operate; and last, its price. Proceeding thus, you find that Chevrolet alone combines Knee-Action, Body by Fisher, a valve-in-head engine, and cable-controlled brakes—definite additions to motoring pleasure. Further investigation reveals that owners say a Chevrolet saves on gas, oil, and upkeep. If you now consider price you discover that the Chevrolet is priced extremely low. Your Chevrolet dealer invites you to go over the facts with him.
